AROUND YAMASHIRO

YAMASHIRO ONSEN A HOT SPRING TOWN WITH A HISTORY OF 1,300 YEARS

What is the "Yunogawa"?

During the Edo period, hot spring towns were built centered around a public bath. Inns were built around the perimeter of a public path, and guests tended to stay for long periods of time. Some were there for medical purposes and others just enjoyed strolling in nature. The public bath was called "Soyu", and the area surrounding the Soyu was called "Yunogawa" in the Hokuriku dialect. Here, Japan's traditional hot spring culture still remains in its historical townscape.

Kosoyu

[古総湯]

Symbol of the Yunogawa

In 2010, the Kosoyu (old public bath) was recreated in the Yunogawa. The Kosoyu provides a Meiji era atmosphere, not just in the exterior and interior appearances, but also in the way bathers use the bath, allowing visitors to experience the history and culture of Yamashiro Hot Spring while enjoying a hot soak. Among successive Soyu buildings, this one provides the best hot spring feeling. On the second floor, there is a space for bathers to cool off after a bath, and the floors and walls of the bathrooms are covered in Kutani-ware tiles.

Iroha Soan Hut (Rosanjin's temporary residence)

[魯山人寓居跡いろは草庵]

The roots of Kitaoji Rosanjin are located here.

Kitaoji Rosanjin, who was well known as a unique versatile artist working in a variety of media, stayed at Yamashiro Hot Spring during one period of his life. The workshop in which he single-mindedly carved the signpost and the study in which he immersed himself in paintings and writings, as well as the sunken hearth around which he engaged the men of Yamashiro Hot Spring in deep conversation, all convey the personality and talent of Rosanjin even now.

Enjoy trying your hand with a potter's wheel or decorating finished ceramics.
